Justis Publishing signs Business Law Reports content agreement with ICLR

Legal electronic publisher Justis Publishing Ltd¹ has signed an agreement with the Incorporated Council of Law Reporting² to publish the Business Law Reports on their full-text online legal library service, Justis.com.

Launched last year and updated monthly, cases in the new series have been selected for their usefulness in advising business clients. Covering Company, Commercial and Intellectual Property law, the overlap with the Law Reports (also available on Justis.com) is minimal.

Arranged as an easy-to-search, focused collection, it is rare among specialist series in that it does not confine itself to a narrow academic field of law. Instead, its subject matter is of interest to chancery and common law practitioners, and to solicitors whose clients are concerned with issues such as arbitration, building, competition law, business tenancies, contracts, banking and taxation.

Masoud Gerami, Managing Director of Justis Publishing Ltd, explained that the ICLR is a high-profile and respected body with the infrastructure and editorial expertise in place to produce series of case reports in a number of specialised subject areas. "We are very pleased that they have started the process with the Business Law Reports," he said, "and we're glad to have them on Justis from the beginning." Adding that his company is looking forward to working with the council on this young but important new series, he went on to express hope that "there will be more series on the way."

Commenting further on the partnership, John Cobbett, Secretary of the ICLR, said: "I hope that the launch of the archive edition of the Business Law Reports on Justis will be as successful as the print edition, which is now a leading commercial law series. Justis Publishing seems very well equipped for the task."

The archive of the Business Law Reports is available on Justis.com.
